INTRODUCTION

It is not only an honour but also a great responsibility to become the first director of the Yemisi Shyllon Museum of Art (YSMA) at Pan-Atlantic University. I am excited about the contribution this new unit of the university can make towards a better society. At YSMA, we are also aware of our responsibility as a pioneering university art museum in the country.

We are truly grateful to Prince Shyllon for his generous and ambitious contribution towards the implementation of this dream and to Pan-Atlantic University for supporting it from the onset. Thanks to Prince Shyllon, the YSMA is privileged to have one of the most comprehensive and diverse art collections in the country and to make it accessible to all visitors. We hope that YSMA will become a gateway to the Pan-Atlantic University and a visitors' destination in Lagos.

Jess CASTELLOTE | YSMA Director

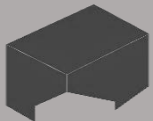

SPONSOR'S STATEMENT

Iron Capital is proud to be partners with the Yemisi Shyllon Museum of Art at Pan-Atlantic University in its opening exhibition. The ingenuity in the application of local insights (and materials) to create world-class art resonates throughout this exhibition, in line with our business practices.

Iron Capital is an Africa based, Africa focused investment banking firm dedicated to providing financial advisory services to pan-African organisations that are ready to build, scale, and employ. To learn more about our services go to www.ironcapital.africa where we do different differently.

CURATOR'S STATEMENT

Artists across time and space have explored materials not only with ritual and symbolic significance but also social, political and economic functions. This exhibition invites us to reflect on the material culture of Nigeria through engagement with the various materials explored by Nigerian artists through the ages. Although an array of foreign art materials is now available in Nigeria, contemporary artists like their ancestors continue to continue to advance the indigenous aesthetic tradition through continuous re-imagination of the physical and textual qualities of local materials.

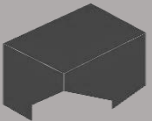

Using works from the museum's permanent collection, complemented by loans from artists and collectors, works in clay, wood, metal, fibre, beads and repurposed objects, are used to show how Nigerian artists have explored different materials available within their environment, mirroring a broad spectrum of social realities and cultural evolutionary trends. The exhibition in this gallery also draws on the materiality and expressive potential of various art media as a way of highlighting under-examined aspects of the original materials with which Nigerian artists have worked with over time.
